Working on a project with Peter Rice is a permanent source of astonishment all along the process of realisation. In the most unexpected moments he comes with those simple sparkling ideas that make you think differently, about the way you think. Not only he comes on the next meeting with a complete new concept and approach of the all subject, but he helps you anchor your own perspective from a slightly different angle and deeper point a view without drying or weakening your own idea, as perrocan is it can be.

What makes me think of Peter as a true creative Artist, beside his numerous and recognized talents, is that he is able to preserve in the most complex operations an explosive quality, that is simplicity. Like a composer, he moulds the matter he is working on to its destination, inventing new structural organisation that even change our perception of that matter itself.

In that relation between the shape and the structure, between the bones, the flesh and the skin, as the masters of Japanese No Theater would put it, the subtle art of Peter Rice will surprise us with that unpredictable way of expressing a unique and simple inspiration that organises it all.

Even though it is his field of predilection, Peter Rice does not belong exclusively to the world of engineering and architecture, and we are longing to read his books, see his theater sets, and view his films, so more people can have access to the art of this magician of our time.

Barbara!

Reas correct: if there are faults and awkward "english":

Let us know what you think if it's OK.

Dear Humbert -

Thank you for your writing - it's wonderful.
Just one word I don't understand, I have circled it (attached)

Petar has suggested that I should come to the Moonlight Shakespear Performance on the night of the 17th June - but I would only come if there is not a problem with too many people, and of course I would stay elsewhere and return to London on the 18th June.

But I thought it might also be a good opportunity to collect your shaving mirrors.

Yours Barbara.
